The African explorer, Duke Doolittle, comes to the editor to sell him his book on hunting. He tells of his voyage and his adventures after big game in Bambazoo, showing the editor the pictures. A leopard pursues him, and he shoots the spots off it. He then loses his gun just as the beast is about to jump on him. The editor asks what happened after that, and the Duke says that it is a serial and he won't finish it for about four years.
